NOTES - REMBERT CEMETERY (Page 50 of Volume I)

The compilers were told this cemetery was called Old Harmony Cemetery. An article by Clark Porteous, The Memphis Press-Scimitar, 14 July 1967, reported this cemetery was the site of an old religious campground before the Civil War. There was a picture of a family member, Rembert H. Williams, Jr., 6283 Old Millington Road, standing before the angel monument. The monument was erected by Sam Rembert in memory of his brother, Confederate Pvt. Andrew Rembert, 18, killed at the Battle of Shiloh, 5-6 April 1862. They were sons of Samuel Stokes Rembert who also had a daughter, Margaret Rembert Steele. S.S. Rembert was reported to have driven a team of horses and a wagon to the battle site to recover his son's body. The Rembert family was of French Huguenot descent, came to the Colonies from France in the 17th Century, and came to Shelby County from the Carolinas and Georgia in 1819. The S.S. Rembert who made the trip to Shiloh was reported to have died in 1890. Present family members include Mr. Williams and Mr. S.S. Rembert, Jr., 54 Lombardy, Memphis.
